EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Overview

This Test Claim alleges reimbursable state-mandated activities arising from the amendment of the Meyers-Miliias-Brown Act by Statutes 2011, chapter 680 (AB 646). Staff recommends that the Commission on State Mandates (Commission) find that the test claim statute (which is the only law pled by the City of Glendora (claimant)), did not legally compel the claimant to engage in a collective bargaining procedure known as factfinding. In addition, staff recommends that the Commission find no evidence in the record that the claimant was, as a practical matter, compelled to engage in factfinding. Therefore, staff recommends that the Commission find that the test claim statute does not impose a reimbursable state-mandated program on local agencies within the meaning of article XIII B, section 6 of the California Constitution. On these grounds, staff recommends that the Commission deny the Test Claim.

Procedural History

On October 9, 2011, the Governor signed AB 646, which the Secretary of State chaptered as Statutes 2011, chapter 680. The effective date of the test claim statute was January 1, 2012.

The claimant alleged that it first incurred costs under the test claim statute on June 16, 2015.¹ On June 2, 2016, the claimant filed the Test Claim with the Commission. On July 25, 2016, the Department of Finance filed comments on the Test Claim.² On August 24, 2016, Nichols Consulting filed comments on the Test Claim.³ On September 16, 2016, the claimant filed

Nichols Consulting is an “interested person” under the Commission’s regulations, defined as “any individual, local agency, school district, state agency, corporation, partnership, association, or other type of entity, having an interest in the activities of the Commission.” (California Code of Regulations, title 2, section 1181.2(j).)

rebuttal comments.⁴ On November 16, 2016, Commission staff issued the Draft Proposed Decision.⁵

Commission Responsibilities

Under article XIII B, section 6 of the California Constitution, local agencies and school districts are entitled to reimbursement for the costs of state-mandated new programs or higher levels of service. In order for local government to be eligible for reimbursement, one or more similarly situated local agencies or school districts must file a test claim with the Commission. “Test claim” means the first claim filed with the Commission alleging that a particular statute or executive order imposes costs mandated by the state. Test claims function similarly to class actions and all members of the class have the opportunity to participate in the test claim process and all are bound by the final decision of the Commission for purposes of that test claim.

The Commission is the quasi-judicial body vested with exclusive authority to adjudicate disputes over the existence of state-mandated programs within the meaning of article XIII B, section 6. In making its decisions, the Commission must strictly construe XIII B, section 6 of the California Constitution and not apply it as an “equitable remedy to cure the perceived unfairness resulting from political decisions on funding priorities.”⁶

Staff Analysis

The Meyers-Milias-Brown Act governs the collective bargaining rights and procedures of employees of local agencies.⁷ The primary issue in this case is whether the test claim statute imposes a state-mandated program of mandatory factfinding upon local agencies governed by the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act. “Factfinding”⁸ under California labor law is a process in which a panel of three members reviews evidence relevant to a dispute (e.g., the salaries of similar employees in other jurisdictions) and submits a non-binding recommendation of what the employer and the union should agree to.

1. The Test Claim Statute, by its Plain Language, Does Not Legally Compel Local Agencies to Engage in Mediation or Factfinding.

In this case, the test claim statute does not legally compel local agencies to act. The plain language of the test claim statute provides that, if a mediator is unable to resolve the controversy within 30-days after appointment, the employee organization may request submission to factfinding. However, mediation is voluntary under the plain language of the statutory scheme. Government Code section 3505.4 as replaced by the test claim statute reads in relevant part:

If the mediator is unable to effect settlement of the controversy within 30 days after his or her appointment, the employee organization may request that the parties’ differences be submitted to a factfinding panel.

This is the only sentence in the test claim statute which addresses how factfinding would commence. The remainder of the code sections amended by the test claim statute address the procedures for factfinding. Under the plain language of the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act as it existed prior to the enactment of the test claim statute, mediation was voluntary. Government

⁷ Government Code sections 3500 to 3511, inclusive.

Code section 3505.2, which was not amended by the test claim statute, has read as follows since 1968:

If after a reasonable period of time, representatives of the public agency and the recognized employee organization fail to reach agreement, the public agency and the recognized employee organization or recognized employee organizations together may agree upon the appointment of a mediator mutually agreeable to the parties. Costs of mediation shall be divided one-half to the public agency and one-half to the recognized employee organization or recognized employee organizations.

The plain language of Section 3505.2 — the parties “may agree” to appoint a “mutually agreeable” mediator — means that mediation under the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act is voluntary.⁹

The courts have concluded that mediation under the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act is voluntary. “In the event of a failure to reach agreement after good faith efforts over a reasonable time to do so, the parties may agree to place the disputed matters in the hands of a mediator, but are not required to do so.”¹⁰ “[S]ection 3505.2 does not require mediation. Instead it allows the parties to agree on mediation and a mediator.”¹¹ “We conclude, therefore, that there is a duty to ‘meet and confer in good faith,’ but there is no duty to agree to mediation.”¹²

While other potential impasse procedures exist in the field of labor law (such as, for example, submission of the dispute to a form of binding arbitration named “interest arbitration” or to a factfinding panel), the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act (as it existed prior to the enactment of the test claim statute) did not contain or require an impasse procedure other than voluntary mediation, nor did the test claim statute add any language making such procedures mandatory. Courts have stated: “Several California statutes applicable to different kinds of public employees contain mandatory procedures for identifying and resolving a bargaining impasse, usually requiring mediation. (Citations.) [¶] In contrast with those statutes, the applicable version of the MMBA did not mandate an impasse resolution procedure.”¹³ Moreover, the California Supreme Court has found that “... the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act provides for negotiation and permits the local agency and the employee organization to agree to mediation but not to fact-finding or binding arbitration.”¹⁴

Consequently, the test claim statute allows for factfinding only “[i]f the mediator is unable to effect settlement.” Since mediation remained voluntary upon the effective date of the test claim statute, factfinding — which is commenced only after unsuccessful mediation — is also voluntary under the test claim statute.

Since entering into mediation is a discretionary decision of the local agency, any factfinding that is later required as a result of unsuccessful mediation is at most a downstream requirement of that discretionary decision to mediate. Since the State of California is not obligated to reimburse a local agency for activities which are conducted voluntarily,¹⁵ the test claim statute does not impose a reimbursable state mandate.

2. The Test Claim Statute’s Requirement of a Public Hearing Before the Implementation of a Last, Best, and Final Offer Does Not Legally Compel Local Agencies to Hold a Public Hearing.

The test claim statute can be read to argue that, if a local government employer seeks to implement its last, best, and final offer, the local government employer is mandated to first hold a public hearing — even if the local government employer opted out of mediation and factfinding. Compare former Government Code section 3505.4 (“a public agency that is not required to proceed to interest arbitration may implement its last, best, and final offer”) with the test claim statute’s Government Code section 3505.7 (“a public agency that is not required to proceed to interest arbitration may, after holding a public hearing regarding the impasse, implement its last, best, and final offer”) (new language emphasized).

While the test claim statute appears to create the new requirement of a public hearing regarding an impasse, the local government employer would only be obligated to hold the public hearing if the local government employer decided to impose its last, best, and final offer — and the imposition of the last, best, and final offer is a discretionary activity. The Public Employment Relations Board (PERB) has found, in Operating Engineers Local 3 v. City of Clovis, that “[p]ursuant to MMBA section 3505.4, once an impasse has been properly reached between the parties, a public agency ‘may implement its last, best, and final offer.’ This provision is permissive, not mandatory. Therefore, while the parties are properly at impasse, the City is not obligated to implement its last, best, and final offer.”¹⁶ Under state mandates law, the voluntary actions of a local agency do not create a reimbursable state mandate. “[I]f a local government participates ‘voluntarily,’ i.e., without legal compulsion or compulsion as a practical matter, in a program with a rule requiring increased costs, there is no requirement of state reimbursement.”¹⁷

The discretionary nature of the imposition of the last, best, and final offer renders the prerequisite of a public hearing to be discretionary as well; the public hearing, therefore, is not a reimbursable state-mandate.

¹⁷ Department of Finance v. Commission on State Mandates (2009) 170 Cal.App.4th 1355, 1365-1366 (“POBRA”).

3. There Is No Evidence in the Record that Local Agencies Are Practically Compelled to Engage in Mediation or Factfinding or to Hold a Public Hearing.

The court in *Kern High School District*¹⁸ — which involved the issue of which level of government was responsible for paying for mandatory activities which were part of voluntary educational programs — left open the possibility that a state mandate might be found in circumstances of practical compulsion, where a local entity faced certain and severe penalties as a result of noncompliance with a program that is not legally compelled.

The claimant has not submitted any evidence that it was practically compelled to engage in factfinding. There is no evidence in the record that, for example, the claimant would have automatically suffered a reduction in state or federal funding if it refused to engage in factfinding. Rather, the record reveals that the claimant engaged in voluntary factfinding in or around August 2015, apparently under the mistaken belief that the test claim statute mandated factfinding.¹⁹

If a local agency employer and one of its unions reach an impasse, all that the test claim statute requires is that the local agency employer engage in factfinding if, as a pre-requisite, it previously agreed to voluntary mediation. Under the Section 3505.2, which was not amended by the test claim statute, a local agency employer who has reached impasse is free to decline mediation (which effectively declines factfinding). And, under the test claim statute, a local agency is then free to implement its last, best, and final offer.²⁰ Though it may be true that later enacted regulations and amendments to the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act have changed the voluntary nature of fact-finding, those later changes in law have not been pled and are not before the Commission.

Conclusion

Based on the foregoing discussion and analysis, staff finds that the test claim statute does not legally compel the local agencies to engage in mediation or factfinding or to hold a public hearing and there is no evidence in the record that the claimant or any other local agency was, as a practical matter, compelled to engage in mediation or factfinding, or to hold a public hearing. Therefore, the test claim statute does not impose a reimbursable state-mandated program.

Staff Recommendation

Staff recommends that the Commission adopt the Proposed Decision to deny this Test Claim and authorize staff to make any technical, non-substantive changes following the hearing.

Summary of the Findings

This Test Claim alleges reimbursable state-mandated activities arising from the enactment of amendments to the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act by Statutes 2011, chapter 680 (AB 646). The Commission finds that the test claim statute does not legally compel the City of Glendora (claimant) to engage in a collective bargaining procedure known as factfinding. In addition, the Commission finds no evidence in the record that the claimant or any other local agency was, as a practical matter, compelled to engage in factfinding. Therefore, the test claim statute does not impose a reimbursable state-mandated program on local agencies within the meaning of article XIII B, section 6 of the California Constitution. On these grounds, the Commission denies the Test Claim.

A. Prior Law

1. The General Provisions of the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act

The collective bargaining rights of many local agency employees are governed by the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act, which is codified at Government Code sections 3500 to 3511. Specifically, the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act (also referred to herein as the “MMBA” or the “Act”) applies to employees of California cities, counties, and certain types of special districts.²⁷

The Meyers-Milias-Brown Act obligates each local agency to meet with the relevant “recognized employee organization” — the Act’s term for a labor union — and to meet and confer in good faith regarding wages, hours, and other terms and conditions of employment.²⁸ The relevant provision of the Act, which was added in 1971 and has not been amended since, reads:

The governing body of a public agency, or such boards, commissions, administrative officers or other representatives as may be properly designated by law or by such governing body, shall meet and confer in good faith regarding wages, hours, and other terms and conditions of employment with representatives of such recognized employee organizations, as defined in subdivision (b) of Section 3501, and shall consider fully such presentations as are made by the employee organization on behalf of its members prior to arriving at a determination of policy or course of action.

“Meet and confer in good faith” means that a public agency, or such representatives as it may designate, and representatives of recognized employee organizations, shall have the mutual obligation personally to meet and confer promptly upon request by either party and continue for a reasonable period of time in order to exchange freely information, opinions, and proposals, and to endeavor to reach agreement on matters within the scope of representation prior to the adoption by the public agency of its final budget for the ensuing year. The process should include adequate time for the resolution of impasses where specific procedures for such resolution are contained in local rule, regulation, or ordinance, or when such procedures are utilized by mutual consent.²⁹

Meeting and conferring is intended to result in a tentative agreement which, if adopted, is formalized into a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU).³⁰ From 1969 to 2013, the relevant ²⁷ The Meyers-Milias-Brown Act applies to each “public employee,” which is defined as any person employed by a “public agency.” Government Code section 3501(d). A “public agency” is then defined as “every governmental subdivision, every district, every public and quasi-public corporation, every public agency and public service corporation and every town, city, county, city and county and municipal corporation, whether incorporated or not and whether chartered or not.” Government Code section 3501(c).

²⁸ Government Code section 3505. See also Government Code section 3501(b) (definition of “recognized employee organization”).

²⁹ Government Code section 3505. See also Government Code section 3501(b) (definition of “recognized employee organization”).

provision of the Act, which was not amended by the test claim statute, read:

If agreement is reached by the representatives of the public agency and a recognized employee organization or recognized employee organizations, they shall jointly prepare a written memorandum of such understanding, which shall not be binding, and present it to the governing body or its statutory representative for determination.³¹

2. The Impasse Provisions of the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act Were Limited to Voluntary Mediation.

An “impasse” occurs when “despite the parties best efforts to achieve an agreement, neither party is willing to move from its respective position.”³²

The Meyers-Milias-Brown Act contains several provisions regarding what happens when an impasse in negotiations is reached.

As quoted above, the provision of the Act which requires a local agency and a union to meet and confer in good faith also counsels the negotiating parties to allocate time for a potential impasse. Government Code section 3505 reads in relevant part, “The process should include adequate time for the resolution of impasses where specific procedures for such resolution are contained in local rule, regulation, or ordinance, or when such procedures are utilized by mutual consent.”

In addition, the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act recognizes the right of the negotiating parties to engage in voluntary mediation. Government Code section 3505.2 — which has not been amended since it was enacted in 1968 — reads:

If after a reasonable period of time, representatives of the public agency and the recognized employee organization fail to reach agreement, the public agency and the recognized employee organization or recognized employee organizations together may agree upon the appointment of a mediator mutually agreeable to the parties. Costs of mediation shall be divided one-half to the public agency and one-half to the recognized employee organization or recognized employee organizations.

The courts have concluded that mediation under the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act is voluntary. “In ³¹ Government Code section 3505.1. The quoted language was in effect from 1969 to 2013. After the test claim statute was enacted, Statutes 2013, Chapter 785, which was not pled and is not before the Commission, amended Government Code section 3505.1 to read:

If a tentative agreement is reached by the authorized representatives of the public agency and a recognized employee organization or recognized employee organizations, the governing body shall vote to accept or reject the tentative agreement within 30 days of the date it is first considered at a duly noticed public meeting. A decision by the governing body to reject the tentative agreement shall not bar the filing of a charge of unfair practice for failure to meet and confer in good faith. If the governing body adopts the tentative agreement, the parties shall jointly prepare a written memorandum of understanding.

the event of a failure to reach agreement after good faith efforts over a reasonable time to do so, the parties may agree to place the disputed matters in the hands of a mediator, but are not required to do so.”³³ “[S]ection 3505.2 does not require mediation. Instead it allows the parties to agree on mediation and a mediator.”³⁴ “We conclude, therefore, that there is a duty to ‘meet and confer in good faith,’ but there is no duty to agree to mediation.”³⁵

While other potential impasse procedures exist in the field of labor law (such as, for example, submission of the dispute to a form of binding arbitration named “interest arbitration” or to a factfinding panel), the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act (as it existed prior to enactment of the test claim statute) did not contain an impasse procedure other than voluntary mediation. Courts have stated: “Several California statutes applicable to different kinds of public employees contain mandatory procedures for identifying and resolving a bargaining impasse, usually requiring mediation. (Citations.) [¶] In contrast with those statutes, the applicable version of the MMBA did not mandate an impasse resolution procedure.”³⁶ “Moreover, the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act provides for negotiation and permits the local agency and the employee organization to agree to mediation but not to fact-finding or binding arbitration.”³⁷

B. The Test Claim Statute: Statutes 2011, Chapter 680

1. The Plain Language of the Test Claim Statute

The test claim statute, Statutes 2011, chapter 680, effective January 1, 2012, contains four provisions.

In Section One, the test claim statute repeals the pre-existing version of Government Code section 3505.4.³⁸ The pre-existing version of Government Code section 3505.4 read:

If after meeting and conferring in good faith, an impasse has been reached between the public agency and the recognized employee organization, and impasse procedures, where applicable, have been exhausted, a public agency that is not required to proceed to interest arbitration may implement its last, best, and final offer, but shall not implement a memorandum of understanding. The unilateral implementation of a public agency’s last, best, and final offer shall not deprive a recognized employee organization of the right each year to meet and confer on matters within the scope of representation, whether or not those matters are included in the unilateral implementation, prior to the adoption by the public agency of its annual budget, or as otherwise required by law.³⁹

In Section Two, the test claim statute replaces Government Code Section 3505.4 to read:

3505.4. (a) If the mediator is unable to effect settlement of the controversy within 30 days after his or her appointment, the employee organization may request that the parties' differences be submitted to a factfinding panel. Within five days after receipt of the written request, each party shall select a person to serve as its member of the factfinding panel. The Public Employment Relations Board shall, within five days after the selection of panel members by the parties, select a chairperson of the factfinding panel.

(b) Within five days after the board selects a chairperson of the factfinding panel, the parties may mutually agree upon a person to serve as chairperson in lieu of the person selected by the board.

(c) The panel shall, within 10 days after its appointment, meet with the parties or their representatives, either jointly or separately, and may make inquiries and investigations, hold hearings, and take any other steps it deems appropriate. For the purpose of the hearings, investigations, and inquiries, the panel shall have the power to issue subpoenas requiring the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of evidence. Any state agency, as defined in Section 11000, the California State University, or any political subdivision of the state, including any board of education, shall furnish the panel, upon its request, with all records, papers, and information in their possession relating to any matter under investigation by or in issue before the panel.

(d) In arriving at their findings and recommendations, the factfinders shall consider, weigh, and be guided by all the following criteria:

- (1) State and federal laws that are applicable to the employer.
- (2) Local rules, regulations, or ordinances.
- (3) Stipulations of the parties.
- (4) The interests and welfare of the public and the financial ability of the public agency.
- (5) Comparison of the wages, hours, and conditions of employment of the employees involved in the factfinding proceeding with the wages, hours, and conditions of employment of other employees performing similar services in comparable public agencies.
- (6) The consumer price index for goods and services, commonly known as the cost of living.

employment, and all other benefits received.

(8) Any other facts, not confined to those specified in paragraphs (1) to (7), inclusive, which are normally or traditionally taken into consideration in making the findings and recommendations.

In Section 3, the test claim statute adds to the Government Code a new Section 3505.5 which reads:

3505.5. (a) If the dispute is not settled within 30 days after the appointment of the factfinding panel, or, upon agreement by both parties within a longer period, the panel shall make findings of fact and recommend terms of settlement, which shall be advisory only. The factfinders shall submit, in writing, any findings of fact and recommended terms of settlement to the parties before they are made available to the public. The public agency shall make these findings and recommendations publicly available within 10 days after their receipt.

(b) The costs for the services of the panel chairperson selected by the board, including per diem fees, if any, and actual and necessary travel and subsistence expenses, shall be equally divided between the parties.

(c) The costs for the services of the panel chairperson agreed upon by the parties shall be equally divided between the parties, and shall include per diem fees, if any, and actual and necessary travel and subsistence expenses. The per diem fees shall not exceed the per diem fees stated on the chairperson's résumé on file with the board. The chairperson's bill showing the amount payable by the parties shall accompany his or her final report to the parties and the board. The chairperson may submit interim bills to the parties in the course of the proceedings, and copies of the interim bills shall also be sent to the board. The parties shall make payment directly to the chairperson.

(d) Any other mutually incurred costs shall be borne equally by the public agency and the employee organization. Any separately incurred costs for the panel member selected by each party shall be borne by that party.

(e) A charter city, charter county, or charter city and county with a charter that has a procedure that applies if an impasse has been reached between the public agency and a bargaining unit, and the procedure includes, at a minimum, a process for binding arbitration, is exempt from the requirements of this section and Section 3505.4 with regard to its negotiations with a bargaining unit to which the impasse procedure applies.

In Section 4, the test claim statute adds to the Government Code a new Section 3505.7 which reads:

3505.7. After any applicable mediation and factfinding procedures have been exhausted, but no earlier than 10 days after the factfinders' written findings of fact and recommended terms of settlement have been submitted to the parties pursuant to Section 3505.5, a public agency that is not required to proceed to interest arbitration may, after holding a public hearing regarding the impasse, implement its last, best, and final offer, but shall not implement a memorandum of understanding. The unilateral implementation of a public agency's last, best, and final offer shall not deprive a recognized employee organization of the right each year to meet and confer on matters within the scope of representation, whether or not those matters are included in the unilateral implementation, prior to the adoption by the public agency of its annual budget, or as otherwise required by law.

2. The Legislative History of the Test Claim Statute

The legislative history of AB 646 — the bill which became the test claim statute— includes evidence that the author intended to insert a new factfinding procedure into the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act which would have been made mandatory by the inclusion of mandatory mediation provisions.⁴⁰ However, the author removed the mandatory mediation provisions from the bill when it was heard by the Assembly Committee on Public Employees, Retirement and Social Security.

The Assembly Committee on Public Employees, Retirement and Social Security bill analysis on the test claim quotes the bill's author, Assemblywoman Toni G. Atkins, D-San Diego who recognized that the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act, in its then-current form, did not mandate factfinding or any other form of impasse procedure: "Currently, there is no requirement that public agency employers and employee organizations engage in impasse procedures where efforts to negotiate a collective bargaining agreement have failed," the Assemblywoman stated.⁴¹

However, although Assemblywoman Atkins argued in favor of the perceived benefits of mandatory impasse procedures stating: "[t]he creation of mandatory impasse procedures is likely to increase the effectiveness of the collective bargaining process, by enabling the parties to employ mediation and fact-finding in order to assist them in resolving differences that remain after negotiations have been unsuccessful,"⁴² and "[f]act-finding panels can also help facilitate agreement, by making objective, factual determinations that can help the parties engage in productive discussions and reach reasonable decisions,"⁴³ opponents of AB 646 argued that "requiring mediation and factfinding prior to imposing a last, best and final offer would simply add costs and be unhelpful to both the employer and the employees."⁴⁴

The author agreed to a series of amendments, which the Committee memorialized as follows:

⁴⁰ See Exhibit X, AB 646 as amended March 23, 2011, amendments indicated in strike out and italics.

- 1) Remove all of the provisions related to mediation, making no changes to existing law.
- 2) Remove the requirements that an employer and employee organization submit their differences to a fact-finding panel and instead provides employees organizations with the option to participate in the fact-finding process established in Government Section 3505.4 which is added by this measure.
- 3) Clarify the existing requirement for a public employer to conduct a public impasse hearing prior to imposing its last, best, and final offer.⁴⁵

After the amendments were made, the Senate Floor Analysis stated that AB 646:

1. Allows an employee organization to request fact-finding when a mediator has been unsuccessful at effectuating a resolution to a labor dispute within 30 days of appointment.
3. Requires the fact-finding panel to meet with the parties within 10 days after appointment, and take other steps it deems appropriate.
5. Requires state and local public agencies, if requested by the panel, to furnish the panel with all records, papers and information in their possession relating to any matter under investigation by the panel.
7. Requires the fact-finding panel to make findings of fact and recommend terms of a settlement if the dispute is not settled within 30 days.
8. Requires the costs of the chairperson of the fact-finding panel to be paid for by both parties whether or not PERB selected the chairperson.”⁴⁶

3. Questions About the Language of the Test Claim Statute

Almost immediately after passage, the test claim statute was criticized on the grounds that, while the author’s intent had been to make factfinding mandatory under the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act, the test claim statute as drafted merely made factfinding voluntary, not mandatory.

AB 646, as passed, was drafted to state that mediation was a pre-requisite to factfinding. Since mediation under the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act is voluntary, and AB 646 as enacted did not include provisions to make it mandatory, this drafting rendered factfinding voluntary as well.

Specifically, the first sentence of newly added Section 3505.4 was drafted to read, “If the mediator is unable to effect settlement of the controversy within 30 days after his or her appointment, the employee organization may request that the parties’ differences be submitted to a factfinding panel.”

Commentators and practitioners promptly criticized the language. Twelve days after the Governor signed AB 646, the employment law firm of Littler Mendelson P.C. posted the following analysis to its web site:

⁴⁵ Exhibit X, Assembly Committee on Public Employees, Retirement and Social Security, Analysis of AB 646 as amended March 23, page 3, emphasis added.

⁴⁶ Exhibit X, Senate Rules Committee, Floor Analysis of AB 646, pages 2-3.

It is questionable whether this new law actually fulfills the bill sponsor's apparent intent of requiring an employer to submit to factfinding before implementing its last, best and final offer in all cases where the union has requested factfinding. The bill sponsor's comments regarding AB 646 reference "the creation of mandatory impasse procedures," giving the impression of an intent to require these impasse procedures (e.g., factfinding and a public hearing) in all cases where a union requests them.

However, the law, as written, arguably does not achieve this goal. AB 646 specifically states that "[i]f the mediator is unable to effect settlement of the controversy within 30 days after his or her appointment, the employee organization may request . . . factfinding . . ." Because mediation is not required under the current version of the MMBA and, importantly, AB 646 did not change the voluntariness of mediation under the statute, it appears the union may not be able to insist on factfinding in the absence of a failed attempt at settling the dispute before a mediator. If true, it is possible that an employer can avoid the costs and delays associated with factfinding by declining to participate in mediation and, thereafter, implementing its last, best and final offer. Indeed, new Government Code section 3505.7, which was added by AB 646 and permits implementation of the last, best and final offer "[a]fter any applicable mediation and factfinding procedures have been exhausted," lends some support to this interpretation of the new law because it opens the door to the possibility that such procedures are permissive, but not necessarily required.⁴⁷

Other commentators shared the concern. "[T]he statute's vague and inconsistent language leaves many questions unanswered as to how this new process will really work. . . . We believe the legislative history clearly shows that AB 646 does not require mediation. However, without mediation, there is no clear trigger for fact-finding."⁴⁸ "Without mediation — voluntary or mandatory — there is no explicit trigger for fact-finding, and opinions as to whether fact-finding is truly mandatory are already split."⁴⁹ "Can factfinding be avoided by not agreeing to mediation?”⁵⁰ “The question ‘Is mediation required before the union can request factfinding?’ may be the most obvious point of confusion created by the statute, but others exist.”⁵¹

C. The Subsequent Adoption of Regulations and a 2012 Statute Which Have Not Been Pled in This Test Claim

After the enactment of the test claim statute, Public Employee Relations Board (PERB) adopted emergency regulations and the Legislature enacted a subsequent statute in 2012 to address whether the factfinding process was required if the parties had not gone through mediation. The claimant did not plead the PERB regulations or the subsequent statute in its Test Claim, and, consequently, the Commission is not herein rendering a ruling upon these laws.⁵² However, they are included in the Background for history and context.

1. PERB Regulation 32802

Within two months of the Governor’s signing of AB 646, PERB, which has administered the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act since July 2001,⁵³ adopted emergency regulations.⁵⁴ PERB filed the emergency rulemaking package with the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on December 19, 2011.⁵⁵ The emergency regulations became operative on January 1, 2012⁵⁶ — the same date that the test claim statute became effective. The emergency regulations became permanent after PERB transmitted a Certificate of Compliance to the OAL on or about June 22, 2012.⁵⁷

One section of these emergency regulations — codified at California Code of Regulations, title 8, section 32802 (section 32802) — sought to implement, interpret, or make specific the provisions of the test claim statute.⁵⁸ Section 32802 of the emergency regulations read:

32802. Request for Factfinding Under the MMBA.

(a) An exclusive representative may request that the parties' differences be submitted to a factfinding panel. The request shall be accompanied by a statement that the parties have been unable to effect a settlement. Such a request may be filed:

(1) Not sooner than 30 days, but not more than 45 days, following the appointment or selection of a mediator pursuant either to the parties' agreement to mediate or a mediation process required by a public agency's local rules; or

(2) If the dispute was not submitted to mediation, not later than 30 days following the date that either party provided the other with written notice of a declaration of impasse.

(b) A request for factfinding must be filed with the appropriate regional office; service and proof of service pursuant to Section 32140 are required.

(c) Within five working days from the date the request is filed, the Board shall notify the parties whether the request satisfies the requirements of this Section. If the request does not satisfy the requirements of subsection (a)(1) or (2), above, no further action shall be taken by the Board. If the request is determined to be sufficient, the Board shall request that each party provide notification of the name and contact information of its panel member within five working days.

(d) "Working days," for purposes of this Section and Section 32804, shall be those days when the offices of the Public Employment Relations Board are officially open for business.

(e) The determination as to whether a request is sufficient shall not be appealable to the Board itself.⁵⁹

PERB Regulation 32802(a) begins by stating that "[a]n exclusive representative may request that the parties' differences be submitted to a factfinding panel" — a statement which is not qualified in terms of whether or not mediation has occurred.

⁵⁷ See History at bottom of Code of California Regulations, title 8, section 32802. See also Register 2012, No. 31.

⁵⁸ Section 32804 was also amended by the emergency regulations and pertained to the test claim statute, specifically, the manner in which PERB would select the chairperson of the factfinding panel. Since Section 32804 is not relevant to the material issue of whether factfinding is mandatory under the test claim legislation, this Decision will not focus on Section 32804.

Regulation 32802(a)(1) specifies a timeline for the initiation of factfinding after mediation, and Regulation 32802(a)(2) specifies a timeline for the initiation of factfinding when mediation has not occurred. Regulation 32802(a)(2) reads:

If the dispute was not submitted to mediation, not later than 30 days following the date that either party provided the other with written notice of a declaration of impasse.

During the promulgation of this regulation, the question arose as to whether the test claim statute authorized PERB to oversee factfinding when no mediation had occurred since the test claim statute was silent on this point.

On November 8 and 10, 2011 — about one month after the Governor signed AB 646 — PERB staff members met in Oakland and Glendale with members of the public, including officials of unions representing city and county employees, regarding the draft regulations.⁶⁰ PERB also held formal meetings in its Sacramento headquarters about the regulations on December 8, 2011, and April 12, 2012.⁶¹

At these meetings, whether the test claim statute mandated factfinding in the absence of mediation was questioned.

During at least one of the non-Sacramento meetings, a union official "stated that at the PERB meeting he attended, the unions agreed that factfinding should be required even when mediation was not required by law."⁶²

PERB member Dowdin Calvillo "commented on concerns expressed by some constituents with regard to staff's recommendation that factfinding would be required in situations where mediation was not required by law."⁶³ Member Calvillo "said she was not sure if the Board had authority to require factfinding in those situations given that AB 646 was silent in that regard but that she was willing to allow the language to move forward as staff proposed and allow OAL to make that determination."⁶⁴

According to PERB Minutes, Mr. Chisholm, the Division Chief of PERB's Office of General Counsel, "stated that AB 646 provides, for the first time, a mandatory impasse procedure under the MMBA.”⁶⁵ Mr. Chisholm stated that AB 646 “established a mandatory factfinding procedure under the MMBA that did not exist previously.”⁶⁶ “Mr. Chisholm acknowledged the comments and discussions held regarding whether factfinding may be requested where mediation has not occurred. PERB, having considered all aspects, including comments and discussions held, related statutes, and legislative history and intent, drafted a regulatory package that would provide certainty and predictability.”⁶⁷

During the period of time when the emergency regulations were being reviewed by OAL, the City of San Diego, as an interested person, submitted comments arguing that Regulation 32802(a) was inconsistent with the test claim statute and also lacked clarity. “PERB’s proposed regulation 32802(a) is not consistent with A.B. 646, nor does it provide clarity to the public agencies subject to it,” the City of San Diego wrote, through its City Attorney.⁶⁸ “A.B. 646 does not authorize or mandate factfinding when the parties do not engage in mediation of a dispute, nor does A.B. 646 mandate mediation.”⁶⁹

In response to the City of San Diego’s letter, PERB agreed “that nothing in AB 646 changes the voluntary nature of mediation under the MMBA,” but stated that “any attempt to read and harmonize all of the statutory changes made by AB 646 must end in the conclusion that factfinding is mandatory”⁷⁰ PERB argued that its proposed emergency regulations were consistent with legislative intent and that the “majority of interested parties, both employer and labor representatives, also urged a reading of AB 646 that provides for a factfinding request whether mediation occurs or not.”⁷¹ PERB also argued that, since the test claim statute repealed the prior language regarding when an employer could implement its last, best, and final offer, the replacement language — which references factfinding — implies that factfinding must be a mandatory step in the process which leads to the ability of the employer to implement its last, best, and final offer.⁷²

2. Statutes 2012, Chapter 314 (AB 1606) Amends Government Code Section 3505.4, Effective January 1, 2013.

AB 1606, Statutes 2012, chapter 314, went into effect on January 1, 2013. According to the author of the bill, “Ambiguity in the drafting of AB 646 has called into question whether an employer can forgo all impasse procedures, including mediation and fact-finding. In fact, several government employers argue that AB 646 does not require fact-finding if the parties do not engage in mediation.”⁷³

Although PERB adopted Regulation 32802, “the issue whether AB 646 requires that mediation occur as a precondition to an employee organization’s ability to request fact-finding remains unresolved,” the author continued.⁷⁴ “AB 1606 would clarify that fact-finding is available to employee organizations in all situations, regardless of whether the employer and employee have engaged in mediation.”⁷⁵

Unidentified supporters of AB 1606 were quoted as stating,

During the PERB rulemaking process, it became apparent that AB 646 was drafted in a manner that called into question whether mediation was a precondition to an employee organization’s ability to request factfinding. . . . AB 1606 seeks to provide a final, statutory clarification of this question, by revising the Government Code to allow factfinding in all circumstances in which a local public employer and its employees have reached an impasse in their negotiations.⁷⁶

⁷² “[I]t also is important to consider that AB 646 repealed the prior language of section 3505.4, which set forth the conditions under which an employer could implement its last, best and final offer (LBFO). In new section 3505.7, added by AB 646, the MMBA now provides that implementation of the employer’s LBFO may occur only ‘[a]fter any applicable mediation and factfinding procedures have been exhausted, but no earlier than 10 days after the factfinders’ written findings of fact and recommended terms of settlement have been submitted to the parties pursuant to Section 3505.5.’ (Emphasis added.)” Exhibit E, Public Employment Relations Board’s Response to the Request for the Rulemaking Files, pages 124-125 (Letter from Les Chisholm, PERB, to Peggy J. Gibson, Office of Administrative Law, dated December 28, 2011, pages 1-2).

According to the Senate Public Employment & Retirement Committee AB 1606, “. . . clarifies that if the dispute leading to impasse was not submitted to mediation, the employee organization may request factfinding within 30 days after the date that either party provided the other with written notice of the declaration of impasse.”⁷⁷

Statutes 2012, chapter 314 (AB 1606), contains two sections. Section One codifies the timelines and language contained in PERB Regulation 32802(a) and states that a union may demand factfinding whether or not mediation has occurred. Section One amends Government Code section 3505.4(a) to read (in underline and italic):

3505.4. (a) ~~If the mediator is unable to effect settlement of the controversy within 30 days after his or her appointment, the~~ The employee organization may request that the parties’ differences be submitted to a factfinding panel: not sooner than 30 days, but not more than 45 days, following the appointment or selection of a mediator pursuant to the parties’ agreement to mediate or a mediation process required by a public agency’s local rules. If the dispute was not submitted to mediation, an employee organization may request that the parties’ differences be submitted to a factfinding panel not later than 30 days following the date that either party provided the other with a written notice of a declaration of impasse. Within five days after receipt of the written request, each party shall select a person to serve as its member of the factfinding panel. The Public Employment Relations Board shall, within five days after the selection of panel members by the parties, select a chairperson of the factfinding panel.

Section One also adds to Government Code section 3505.4 a new subdivision (e) which reads:

(e) The procedural right of an employee organization to request a factfinding panel cannot be expressly or voluntarily waived.

Section Two makes a finding the legislation is technical and clarifying, by stating:

SEC. 2. The Legislature finds and declares that the amendments to Section 3505.4 of the Government Code made by this act are intended to be technical and clarifying of existing law.

III. Positions of the Parties and Interested Person

A. City of Glendora

The claimant argues that the following activities are mandated by the test claim statute and are reimbursable state mandates:

If mediation did not result in settlement after 30 days and if the employee organization requests factfinding:

- 1) The agency must notice impasse hearing if delay in factfinding request.
- 2) Agency must select a person to serve as its member of the factfinding panel, and pay for the costs of its member.

⁷⁷ Exhibit X, Senate Public Employment & Retirement Committee, Analysis of AB 1606 as introduced February, 7, 2012 [emphases omitted], page 2.

- 3) If chairperson is not approved by other party, agency must select a different chairperson.
- 4) PERB shall appoint a panel Chairperson and the agency shall pay for half of the panel chairperson's costs.
- 5) The agency shall review and respond to all requests and subpoenas made by the panel and furnish panel with all relevant documents as requested. (This includes both administrative time to review and approve materials as well as clerical time to process these requests. Travel time would also be reimbursable if required.)
- 6) The agency shall participate in all factfinding hearings.
- 7) The agency shall review and make the panel findings publicly available within 10 days of receipt.
- 8) The agency shall pay for half of the costs of the factfinding.
- 9) The agency must hold a public impasse hearing, if it chooses to impose its last, best offer.
- 10) The agency shall meet and confer with union and submit/resubmit last, best offer.

One time costs would include:

- 1) Train staff on new requirements.
- 2) Revise local agency manuals, policies, and guidelines related to new factfinding requirements.⁷⁸

In response to Finance's comments on the Test Claim, the claimant filed written rebuttal comments.⁷⁹

In these rebuttal comments, the claimant took the position, without analysis, that the test claim statute established a mandatory factfinding procedure: "AB 646 changed the MMBA significantly by establishing new mandatory factfinding procedures, effective January 1, 2012."⁸⁰ The claimant also challenged the specific stances taken by Finance regarding what activities were newly imposed, or were discretionary.⁸¹

B. Department of Finance

Finance asserts that the following activities identified in the Test Claim were required by prior law and, therefore, are not new programs or higher levels of service under state mandate law:

- 2) Agency must select a person to serve as its member of the factfinding panel, and pay for the costs of its member.

- 3) If chairperson is not approved by other party, agency must select a different chairperson.
- 5) The agency shall review and respond to all requests and subpoenas made by the panel and furnish panel with all relevant documents as requested. (This includes both administrative time to review and approve materials as well as clerical time to process these requests. Travel time would also be reimbursable if required.)
- 6) The agency shall participate in all factfinding hearings.⁸²

Finance further alleges that the following activities 1, 9, and 10, identified in the Test Claim are discretionary and are not mandated at all. These activities are:

- 1) The agency must notice impasse hearing if delay in factfinding request.
- 9) The agency must hold a public impasse hearing, if it chooses to impose its last, best offer.
- 10) The agency shall meet and confer with union and submit/resubmit last, best offer.⁸³

Finally, Finance asserts alleged activities 4 and 8 (below) identified in the Test Claim are not a “program” as defined and are instead “straight costs,” which are not subject to reimbursement:

- 4) PERB shall appoint a panel Chairperson and the agency shall pay for half of the panel chairperson’s costs.
- 8) The agency shall pay for half of the costs of the factfinding.⁸⁴ Finance’s comments do not address one activity identified in the Test Claim: “7) The agency shall review and make the panel findings publicly available within 10 days of receipt.”

C. Nichols Consulting

Interested person Nichols Consulting submitted written comments noting that: (1) the “prior laws” implicated by Finance’s comments with regard to alleged activities 1, 9, and 10, are EERA (the Educational Employment Relations Act) and HEERA (Higher Education Employer-Employee Relations Act), both of which contain factfinding provisions that do not apply to cities, counties and other local agencies which are governed by the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act; and (2) the claimant does not appear to have requested the reimbursement of mediation costs, a subject on which the test claim statute is silent.⁸⁵

IV. Discussion

Article XIII B, section 6 of the California Constitution provides in relevant part the following:

⁸⁵ Exhibit C, Nichols Consulting’s Comments on the Test Claim, pages 1-2.

Whenever the Legislature or any state agency mandates a new program or higher level of service on any local government, the state shall provide a subvention of funds to reimburse such local government for the costs of such programs or increased level of service...

The purpose of article XIII B, section 6 is to “preclude the state from shifting financial responsibility for carrying out governmental functions to local agencies, which are ‘ill equipped’ to assume increased financial responsibilities because of the taxing and spending limitations that articles XIII A and XIII B impose.”⁸⁶ Thus, the subvention requirement of section 6 is “directed to state-mandated increases in the services provided by [local government] ...”⁸⁷

Reimbursement under article XIII B, section 6 is required when the following elements are met:

1. A state statute or executive order requires or “mandates” local agencies or school districts to perform an activity.⁸⁸
2. The mandated activity either:
 - a. Carries out the governmental function of providing a service to the public; or
 - a. Imposes unique requirements on local agencies or school districts and does not apply generally to all residents and entities in the state.⁸⁹
3. The mandated activity is new when compared with the legal requirements in effect immediately before the enactment of the test claim statute or executive order and it increases the level of service provided to the public.⁹⁰
4. The mandated activity results in the local agency or school district incurring increased costs, within the meaning of section 17514. Increased costs, however, are not reimbursable if an exception identified in Government Code section 17556 applies to the activity.⁹¹

The Commission is vested with exclusive authority to adjudicate disputes over the existence of state-mandated programs within the meaning of article XIII B, section 6.⁹² The determination whether a statute or executive order imposes a reimbursable state-mandated program is a question of law.⁹³ In making its decisions, the Commission must strictly construe article XIII B, section 6, and not apply it as an “equitable remedy to cure the perceived unfairness resulting from political decisions on funding priorities.”⁹⁴

Statutes 2011, Chapter 680 (AB 646), Does Not Impose a State-Mandated Program on Local Agencies.

In 2003, the California Supreme Court decided the Kern High School District case and considered the meaning of the term “state mandate” as it appears in article XIII B, section 6 of the California Constitution.⁹⁵ In Kern High School District, school districts participated in various optional education-related programs that were funded by the state and federal government. Each of the underlying funded programs required school districts to establish and utilize school site councils and advisory committees. State open meeting laws later enacted in the mid-1990s required the school site councils and advisory bodies to post a notice and an agenda of their meetings. The school districts requested reimbursement for the notice and agenda costs pursuant to article XIII B, section 6.⁹⁶

There, the Kern court reviewed and affirmed the holding of City of Merced v. State of California,⁹⁷ determining that, when analyzing state-mandate claims, the underlying program must be reviewed to determine if the claimant’s participation in the underlying program is voluntary or legally compelled. The court stated the following:

In City of Merced, the city was under no legal compulsion to resort to eminent domain — but when it elected to employ that means of acquiring property, its obligation to compensate for lost business goodwill was not a reimbursable state mandate, because the city was not required to employ eminent domain in the first place. Here as well, if a school district elects to participate in or continue participation in any underlying voluntary education-related funded program, the district’s obligation to comply with the notice and agenda requirements related to that program does not constitute a reimbursable state mandate.⁹⁸

Thus, the California Supreme Court held as follows:

[W]e reject claimants’ assertion that they have been legally compelled to incur notice and agenda costs, and hence are entitled to reimbursement from the state, based merely upon the circumstance that notice and agenda provisions are mandatory elements of education-related programs in which claimants have participated, *without regard to whether claimant's participation in the underlying program is voluntary or compelled.*⁹⁹

More recently, the court in POBRA held that school districts that choose to employ peace officers and have a school police department are not mandated by the state to comply with the requirements of the Peace Officer Procedural Bill of Rights Act (POBRA).¹⁰⁰ Consistent with the prior decisions of the court, the court stated that “[t]he result of the cases discussed above is that, if a local government participates ‘voluntarily,’ i.e., without legal compulsion or compulsion as a practical matter, in a program with a rule requiring increased costs, there is no requirement of state reimbursement.”¹⁰¹

1. The Test Claim Statute, by its Plain Language, Does Not Legally Compel Local Agencies to Engage in Mediation or Factfinding.

In this case, the test claim statute does not legally compel local agencies to act. The plain language of the test claim statute links factfinding to mediation. Government Code section 3505.4 as replaced by the test claim statute reads in relevant part:

If the mediator is unable to effect settlement of the controversy within 30 days after his or her appointment, the employee organization may request that the parties' differences be submitted to a factfinding panel.¹⁰²

This is the only sentence in the test claim statute which addresses how factfinding would commence. The remainder of the test claim statute addresses the procedures for factfinding. Under the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act as it existed prior to the enactment of the test claim statute, mediation was voluntary and this is supported by numerous cases.¹⁰³ The plain language of the statute indicated that mediation was voluntary. Government Code section 3505.2 read at that time (and still reads to this day):

If after a reasonable period of time, representatives of the public agency and the recognized employee organization fail to reach agreement, the public agency and the recognized employee organization or recognized employee organizations together may agree upon the appointment of a mediator mutually agreeable to the parties. Costs of mediation shall be divided one-half to the public agency and one-half to the recognized employee organization or recognized employee organizations.

The plain language of Section 3505.2 — the parties “may agree” to appoint a “mutually agreeable” mediator — means that mediation under the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act is voluntary.¹⁰⁴

The courts have concluded that mediation under the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act is voluntary. “In the event of a failure to reach agreement after good faith efforts over a reasonable time to do so, the parties may agree to place the disputed matters in the hands of a mediator, but are not required to do so.”¹⁰⁵ “[S]ection 3505.2 does not require mediation. Instead it allows the parties to agree on mediation and a mediator.”¹⁰⁶ “We conclude, therefore, that there is a duty to ‘meet and confer in good faith,’ but there is no duty to agree to mediation.”¹⁰⁷

While other potential impasse procedures exist in the field of labor law (such as, for example, submission of the dispute to a form of binding arbitration named “interest arbitration” or to a factfinding panel), the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act (as it existed prior to the test claim statute did not contain or require an impasse procedure other than voluntary mediation. Courts have stated: “Several California statutes applicable to different kinds of public employees contain mandatory procedures for identifying and resolving a bargaining impasse, usually requiring mediation. (Citations.) [¶] In contrast with those statutes, the applicable version of the MMBA did not mandate an impasse resolution procedure.”¹⁰⁸ “Moreover, the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act provides for negotiation and permits the local agency and the employee organization to agree to mediation but not to fact-finding or binding arbitration.”¹⁰⁹

Consequently, the test claim statute allows for factfinding only “[i]f the mediator is unable to effect settlement.” Since mediation remained voluntary after the effective date of the test claim statute, factfinding — which is triggered by unsuccessful mediation — is a non-reimbursable downstream requirement of a discretionary decision to engage in mediation.¹¹⁰

¹⁰⁴ “‘Shall’ is mandatory and ‘may’ is permissive.” Government Code section 14. “Under ‘well-settled principle[s] of statutory construction,’ we ‘ordinarily’ construe the word ‘may’ as permissive and the word ‘shall’ as mandatory, ‘particularly’ when a single statute uses both terms.” *Tarrant Bell Property, LLC v. Under state mandates law, the voluntary actions of a local agency do not create a reimbursable state mandate. “[T]he core point . . . is that activities undertaken at the option or discretion of a local government entity (that is, actions undertaken without any legal compulsion or threat of penalty for nonparticipation) do not trigger a state mandate and hence do not require reimbursement of funds — even if the local entity is obliged to incur costs as a result of its discretionary decision to participate in a particular program or practice.”¹¹¹ “[I]f a local government participates ‘voluntarily,’ i.e., without legal compulsion or compulsion as a practical matter, in a program with a rule requiring increased costs, there is no requirement of state reimbursement.”¹¹²

Mediation is voluntary under the plain meaning of the test claim statute, and under the test claim statute, fact finding is only triggered by the mediation. Since the State is not obligated to reimburse a local agency for activities which are conducted voluntarily, the test claim statute does not impose a reimbursable state mandate.

Though, as discussed in the Background above, PERB came to a different legal conclusion regarding the test claim statute during the promulgation of PERB Regulation 32802 (which does in fact require fact finding) than the Commission does here, the plain language of the statute, the case law, and the legislative history of AB 646 strongly support the Commission’s conclusion.

As discussed above, the plain language of the test claim statute conditions factfinding upon mediation, which is voluntary. The test claim statute does not contain any language which makes mediation or factfinding mandatory or which requires factfinding in the absence of mediation.

The Commission finds the plain language of the test claim statute to be unambiguous and that the plain meaning therefore controls. “If the words themselves are not ambiguous, we presume the Legislature meant what it said, and the statute’s plain meaning governs.”¹¹³

Moreover, the Legislature specifically chose to omit mandatory mediation from the test claim statute, as is reflected in the Assembly Committee on Public Employees, Retirement and Social Security, Analysis of AB 646 as amended March 23, 2011, page 3 and in the March 23, 2011 amendments themselves.¹¹⁴ With regard to courts or quasi-judicial tribunals, such as the Commission, their rulings may not create or add text which was omitted by the Legislature. In the words of the California Supreme Court:

¹¹¹ Department of Finance v. Commission on State Mandates (Kern High School District), 30 Cal.4th 727, 742.

¹¹² Department of Finance v. Commission on State Mandates (2009) 170 Cal.App.4th 1355, 1365-1366 (“POBRA”).

¹¹³ Even Zohar Construction & Remodeling, Inc. v. Bellaire Townhouses, LLC (2015) 61 Cal.4th 830, 838.

¹¹⁴ See Exhibit X, Assembly Committee on Public Employees, Retirement and Social Security, Analysis of AB 646 as amended March 23, 2011, page 3 and AB 646 as amended March 23, 2011 wherein the author agrees to and takes amendments to “remove all of the provisions related to mediation.”

[I]n construing this, or any statute, we may not broaden or narrow the scope of the provision by reading into it language that does not appear in it or reading out of it language that does. “Our office ... ‘is simply to ascertain and declare’ what is in the relevant statutes, ‘not to insert what has been omitted, or to omit what has been inserted.’ ” (Citation.) “[A] court . . . may not rewrite the statute to conform to an assumed intention which does not appear from its language.” (Citation.)¹¹⁵

Therefore, since the Legislature excluded language making factfinding or mediation mandatory, it is not within the authority of this Commission to re-write the test claim statute and insert new provisions.

PERB supported its reading of the test claim statute by stating that it was harmonizing the test claim statute with the rest of the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act.¹¹⁶ However, even when the test claim statute is read in conjunction with the rest of the Act, nothing in the text passed by the Legislature (in 2011 or before) makes factfinding or mediation mandatory. The process of harmonization cannot be used to add terms which the Legislature has not enacted; phrased differently, a person construing an amended statute may seek to harmonize all of the provisions which have been enacted but cannot add new provisions which have not been enacted.

Nor is the Commission persuaded that, since factfinding is referenced in the statutory section as amended by the test claim statute which authorizes an employer to implement its last, best, and final offer, factfinding is mandatory.¹¹⁷ As amended by the test claim statute, Government Code section 3505.7 authorizes the employer to implement its last, best, and final offer “[a]fter any applicable mediation and factfinding procedures have been exhausted.” The use of the term “applicable” means only that; if a procedure is applicable, it must be exhausted, and, if a procedure is not applicable, it need not be exhausted. Government Code section 3505.7 is not the statutory provision which determines whether or not a procedure is applicable; other provisions of the Act do that. Since Government Code section 3505.7 as amended by the test claim statute linked factfinding to mediation, and since mediation under the Act is indisputably voluntary, then factfinding under the test claim statute is voluntary, and not legally compelled by the State. Nothing in Section 3505.7 changes the voluntary nature of mediation under the Act. Government Code section 3505.7 refers to “any applicable mediation and factfinding procedures.” Under PERB’s reasoning, mediation would also be required (or one of either mediation or factfinding would be required) before an employer could implement its last, best, and final offer. Yet, the legal authorities (cited and quoted above) are unanimous in holding that mediation under the Act is voluntary. Nothing in PERB’s analysis explains how the phrase “any applicable mediation and factfinding procedures” can be construed to mean that mediation is voluntary while factfinding is mandatory. The determination of whether or not mediation or factfinding is voluntary must be determined by reference to other provisions of the Act, not to Section 3505.7.

PERB based its reading in part on the fact that a staffer from the author's legislative office stated in December 2011 (after the test claim statute had been enacted) that mandatory factfinding in all situations was consistent with the legislative intent.¹¹⁸ Post-enactment statements of intent by legislators and their staff are of little or no legal weight. "The views of an individual legislator or staffer concerning the interpretation of legislation may not properly be considered part of a statute's legislative history, particularly when the views are offered after the statute has already been enacted."¹¹⁹

To the extent that PERB relied upon committee reports and other legislative history, the unambiguous plain language of the test claim statute governs instead. "Committee reports, often drafted by unelected staffers, cannot alter a statute's plain language."¹²⁰ "When a statute is unambiguous, its language cannot be expanded or contracted by the statements of individual legislators or committees during the course of the enactment process."¹²¹ And, as discussed above, the Committee Reports in fact reveal that the Legislature was well aware of the omission of the mandatory mediation provisions, although that was not the author's original intent in introducing the bill. As the Assembly Committee on Public Employees, Retirement and Social Security memorialized, the amendments taken by the author:

- 1) Remove all of the provisions related to mediation, making no changes to existing law.
- 2) Remove the requirements that an employer and employee organization submit their differences to a fact-finding panel and instead provides employees organizations with the option to participate in the fact-finding process established in Government Section 3505.4 which is added by this measure.
- 3) Clarify the existing requirement for a public employer to conduct a public impasse hearing prior to imposing its last, best, and final offer.¹²²

PERB based its reading in part on the fact that the "majority of interested parties, both employers and labor representatives, also urged a reading of AB 646 that provides for a factfinding request whether mediation occurs or not.”¹²³ The opinions of third parties on what the law ought to be cannot alter the plain language of the test claim statute or express the intent of the Legislature as a whole.

Therefore, the Commission finds that Statutes 2011, chapter 680 does not legally compel local agencies to comply with the factfinding provisions of the test claim statute.

2. The Test Claim Statute’s Requirement of a Public Hearing Before the Implementation of a Last, Best, and Final Offer Does Not Legally Compel Local Agencies to Hold a Public Hearing.

The test claim statute can be read to argue that, if a local government employer seeks to implement its last, best, and final offer, the local government employer is mandated to first hold a public hearing — even if the local government employer opted out of mediation and factfinding. Compare former Government Code section 3505.4 (“a public agency that is not required to proceed to interest arbitration may implement its last, best, and final offer”) with the test claim statute’s Government Code section 3505.7 (“a public agency that is not required to proceed to interest arbitration may, after holding a public hearing regarding the impasse, implement its last, best, and final offer”) (new language emphasized).

While the test claim statute appears to create the new requirement of a public hearing regarding an impasse, the local government employer would only be obligated to hold the public hearing if the local government employer decided to impose its last, best, and final offer — and the imposition of the last, best, and final offer is a discretionary activity. However, PERB has found, in Operating Engineers Local 3 v. City of Clovis, that “[p]ursuant to MMBA section 3505.4, once an impasse has been properly reached between the parties, a public agency ‘may implement its last, best, and final offer.’ This provision is permissive, not mandatory. Therefore, while the parties are properly at impasse, the City is not obligated to implement its last, best, and final offer.”¹²⁴ Under state mandates law, the voluntary actions of a local agency do not create a reimbursable state mandate. “[I]f a local government participates ‘voluntarily,’ i.e., without legal compulsion or compulsion as a practical matter, in a program with a rule requiring increased costs, there is no requirement of state reimbursement.”¹²⁵

The discretionary nature of the imposition of the last, best, and final offer renders the prerequisite of a public hearing to be discretionary as well; the public hearing, therefore, is not a reimbursable state mandate.

¹²³ Exhibit X, Public Employment Relations Board’s Response to the Request for the Rulemaking Files, page 125 (Letter from Les Chisholm, PERB, to Peggy J. Gibson, Office of Administrative Law, dated December 28, 2011, page 2).

¹²⁵ Department of Finance v. Commission on State Mandates (2009) 170 Cal.App.4th 1355, 1365-1366 (“POBRA”).

3. There Is No Evidence in the Record That Local Agencies Are Practically Compelled to Engage in Mediation or Factfinding or to Hold a Public Hearing.

The court in Kern High School District left open the possibility that a state mandate might be found in circumstances of practical compulsion, where a local entity faced certain and severe penalties as a result of noncompliance with a program that is not legally compelled. The court in POBRA explained further that a finding of “practical compulsion” requires a concrete showing in the record that a failure to engage in the activity in question will result in certain and severe penalties and that as a practical matter, local agencies do not have a genuine choice of alternative measures.¹²⁶

The claimant has not submitted any evidence that the claimant was under a practical compulsion to engage in factfinding. There is no evidence in the record that, for example, the claimant would have automatically suffered draconian consequences, if it refused to engage in factfinding. Rather, the record reveals that the claimant engaged in voluntary factfinding in or around August 2015 or perhaps mandatory factfinding under a later enacted statute or regulation that his not before the Commission, apparently under the mistaken belief that the test claim statute mandated factfinding.¹²⁷

If a local agency government employer like the claimant and one of its unions reached an impasse, all that the test claim statute required was that the local agency employer engage in factfinding if, as a pre-requisite, the local agency employer previously agreed to voluntary mediation — which the local agency employer was under no obligation to do. Under the test claim statute, a local agency employer who has reached impasse was free to decline mediation (and thus factfinding) and to implement its last, best, and final offer.¹²⁸

In addition, the claimant has not submitted evidence that it is practically compelled to implement a last, best, and final offer which would then trigger the requirement under the test claim statute to hold a public hearing.

V. Conclusion

Based on the foregoing analysis, the Commission finds that Statutes 2011, chapter 680, does not impose a reimbursable state-mandated program.
